Section One

Directions: Read aloud the part between the stars (*). (2 minutes)

So . . . uh, this . . . this morning I want to give you a general introduction to the university system in the United States and Canada. First, I'm going to tell you about three types of university courses. And then my second main topic is course requirements . . . uh, course requirements, which means what you have to do in order to pass the course. OK? So I'll talk about those two topics, and then you'll have time to ask questions before we take a break. OK?

(* ) All right, now as I said, first I want to tell you about three types of university courses. And I should explain that I'm talking about undergraduate courses now, because the system is different at the graduate level. All right. The most common type of undergraduate course is called a lecture course. Got that? A lecture course. Now basically, in a lecture course, the professor talks and the students sit and take notes. This is very important—taking notes, I mean . . . because most of the time the information in a lecture is not the same as the information in your books, and you can expect to have questions on your exams that are based on the lectures. So you see, it isn't enough to just read your textbooks, like it is in some countries; in the U. S. and Canada the system is that you have to attend lectures. And during the lecture, you can't just sit there and listen, you have to take notes. Then later you use the notes to study for your exams. I hope that's clear. (* )

...

Section Two Speak based on one of the following topics, (3 minutes)

Describe one of the systems in your place?

1. Describe your university life based on the following questions:

A. How many students are there in your class?

B. How many sessions have you got each week?

C. When do you usually go to classes each week?

D. Which is your favorite subject?

E. Who is your favorite teacher, why?

F. When you have problems with study, who do you usually go to for help?

2. What is an entrepreneur? What qualities do all entrepreneurs have in common? Do you have these qualities? Would you like to be an entrepreneur? Why or why not?

Now moving on, the third area I want to look at is eating customs. I don't mean the foods that people like to eat in different countries but rather some of the behaviors that are connected with eating. Um, one of these is the use of utensils. You probably know that people in many Asian cultures use chopsticks while in the West they usually use forks, knives, and spoons. Or for example, in parts of India, and in traditional Arab families, too, it's customary to eat with your fingers or to use a piece of bread to scoop up food. Another example is that in some cultures eating everything on your plate is impolite. In Egypt, for example, you should leave some food in your dish at the end of the meal in order to show that your hosts were generous and gave you more than enough to eat. However, people from Bolivia, in South America, expect visitors to eat everything on their plates, and Americans also think a clean plate means you were satisfied with the food.

(*) Finally, the last area of behavior that I want to mention today is gift giving. The rules of gift giving can be very complicated, and it can be embarrassing if you don't know them. For example, in the United States, if you're invited to someone's home for dinner, you can bring wine or flowers or a small gift from your country, but Americans generally don't give gifts in business situations. On the other hand, the Japanese, like many other people in Asia, give gifts often, especially if they want to thank someone like a teacher or a doctor for their kindness. In Japan, the tradition of gift giving is very ancient, and there are detailed rules for everything from the color of the wrapping paper to the time of the gift presentation. Another interesting fact about gift giving is that many cultures have strict rules about gifts you should not give. For example, never give yellow flowers to people from Iran, or they'll think you hate them! (*)

Section Two Speak based on one of the following topics: (3 minutes)

1. Describe your lifestyle based on the following questions:
  - A. What type of family have you got, a large one or a small one?
  - B. What job have you got?
  - C. What food do you eat?
  - D. What kind of house are you living in, a house or an apartment?
  - E. How do you usually spend your money?
  - F. How do you spend your free time?
2. Describe the greeting customs in your place (how do people behave when they say hello, do they shake hands? Do they hug? Or Do they bow?).

Now, while this is an exciting discovery for most of us, some people still ask, “So what? Why should we care? How does this benefit us right here on Earth?” Well, there are lots of ways that we could benefit. First, by exploring Mars, we might be able to find out things about Earth such as why and how life formed here. Second, we might also find that Mars could be a place for people to live in the future. The ability to live on another planet may become necessary in the future—after all, we have limited space, and limited resources here on Earth, right? And finally, we might need someplace else to live in case of a global disaster—you know—a natural disaster or a nuclear war.

(*) So yes, it makes a lot of sense to continue to explore Mars. Not only because human beings have always done that, have always explored new areas, new frontiers of their own knowledge, but also because this specific planet, Mars, seems to be very much like our own Earth and therefore holds so many possibilities for the future. As I said earlier, Mars is our neighbor, and it's time we go over and say hello. (*)

Section Two Speak based on one of the following topics: (3 minutes)

1. What differences have you noticed between British English and American English?
a. g. vocabulary difference, grammar difference, spelling difference and the difference in the use of the verbs, prepositions, etc.
2. Talk about your tastes and preferences based on one of the following topics:
  - A. What kind of music do you like, classical music or popular music, why?
  - B. What's your favorite kind of food?
  - C. What kind of movies do you like, love story, cartoon, science fiction etc?
  - D. What kind of sports do you like, football, basketball, table tennis, volleyball, tennis, swimming, jogging etc?
